Cabin Coffee makes communication a priority with ActionCOACH...

It's not easy pulling a group of diverse individuals together to work as a team. Regardless of the various challenges teams face, they share a purpose. That is to fulfill the need that most people want to be a part of something larger than themselves.

Cabin Coffee was facing these challenges. They were stuck when it came to communication.

Brad Barber, owner, of Cabin Coffee described his business as frustrating. "I knew we needed to have a complete paradigm shift. This thin ice was about to break," said Brad.

With the ice thinning, Brad knew he had to break down the communication barriers. Brad always knew that business coaching was a option.

"I knew what type of services Andy provided. We would visit every now and then and I could see that our team needed help in communicating. It was time to have a new set of eyes and ears." Brad said. "When our team kept talking about the same issues over and over again, we decided to seek help."

After the first meeting with O'Brien and the ActionCOACH team, Barber and his team were gung-ho.

While communication was at the top of his priority list, his initial goals were also to improve leadership and complete the task they had started.

"Andy helped us understand one another better. Furthermore, Andy assisted us to become more organized, to plan more effectively and become better leaders." Barber said. "Andy provided the proper tools and education for us to help one another."

So if you're looking for someone to help you break down communication barriers and assist you and your team communicate more effectively, Andy O'Brien is ready to help with his extensive training as an ActionCOACH Business Coach. These skills make him the perfect candidate to help any business in any industry.
